

Stepan Entsky has a dream. He desires to see his beloved Soviet Union reborn. Using his position in an underground branch of the KGB, he assembles a team of the world's best scientists at an isolated location in northern Russia to work on a project code named ANNA. After working for months, the team achieves their goal, creating the perfect intelligence operative. An android that can alter its physical appearance and use innate abilities to infiltrate secure computer networks all over the world. One that has specific artificial emotions to help it maintain its disguise as a human, one that is almost indistinguishable from us. With the information this android can acquire, Stepan believes he can rebuild the USSR. The only question is, what will the android, Anna, think about her purpose? More importantly, how will she feel about it?
