

These volumes represent the third and fourth of five volumes devoted to Clares middle period, between 1822 and 1837, arguably the years of his finest creativity. The poems contained in these volumes range from examples of Clares satirical and political verse, in The Summons and The Hue & Cry, to a telling expression of his philosophy of nature, in The Eternity of Nature, and probably the most important statement of Clares poetic objectives in To the Rural Muse. If there is any lingering belief in the sameness of Clares verse, these volumes ought surely to dispel it.
