

Life and History (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Life and History The papers which make up this volume were all written during the progress or since the conclusion of the World War. The first and the second come out of the busy days of academic activity before America entered the war. The discussion The University and the Remaking of the World was given in substance in the chapel of Mansfield College, Oxford, a little before the signing of the Armistice. The University and the Republic was the Baccalaureate address at Northwestern University in Nineteen Twenty and attempts to appraise the intellectual situation in America at the close of the war. Finding a Permanent Passion was delivered at Sage Chapel, Cornell University, and attempts to find sources of permanent idealism in a period of reaction. The Place of Religion in the New Era was delivered in the City Temple in London the year after the war closed.
