Excerpt: ... dred years before the birth of Christy he had certainly been treated by our adversaries as a sworn accomplice with Christians to prove the strict completion of it: So fully do this great mans observations verify the very letter of the sentence here denounced! So fully is this sentence executed in every sense! If you take it in the figurative sense, our adversaries themselves evince the accomplishment of it: If you take it in the literal sense, this enmity is, proved by the testimony of the most accurate observer of all mankind, who cannot easily be suspected os conspiring with Chrifitans to manifest the completion of it. But does the serpent feed upon dtift? I Answer, Most infallibly. Nor, perhaps, could he otherwise subsist in those sandy and dusty desarts to which God has, in a good measure, condemned him; tho commentators content themselves with explaining this part of the sentence, from the necessity he is under of eating his food on the ground, and so swallowing dust with it; but if this is thought, by some, not sufficiently to distinguish the curse of the serpent from the natural condition of other creatures, it should be remembered, that a further and more diligent enquiry assures us, that he actually eats the dry, dusty H 4 earth,-earth . And there is not tne least reason to believe, that any other beast in the world does feed in the fame wretched manner, except the scorpion j who is also accounted, by Celfas, a kind of serpent. Nor is the point so clear in relation to the scorpion j tho out of all doubt with regard to the serpent. So ftrangly is the sentence of God executed in every senses and in every part, to a tittle! And as the expression of ticking the dusty signifies, according to the Hebrew idiom, the lowest state of depression and humil...
