Despite being attractive, intelligent and friendly, Sasha Gardner knows no man wants a phone call from her. Because Sasha is a tax auditor for the IRS. Every job has its downside. Auditing may interfere with her social life, but its orderly. It makes sense. And shs very, very good at it. But when unexpected complaints draw her into the tax return of a man shs never met, nothing seems to make sense anymore. Using the information in Jonah Grays return, Sasha begins to assemble his life story: a rising career as a respected financial reporter, a house in a posh seaside village, weekends sailing the coastit all reads like a life Sasha herself had dreamed of living, down to the guys itemized deductions. So why had he left it behind to cover school-board meetings in a one-newspaper town? What begins as a welcome distraction soon becomes a search for answers. Sasha knows its ridiculousshs never even laid eyes on himbut she wouldnt be the first woman to fall for a man who looks good on paper.
